

BOY LEAPS IN RIVER TO ESCAPE POLICE; HELD AS BURGLAR

Saved After Swimming Block and Held With Two Others in Silk Theft Plot.

Milk robberies have been so numerous on the Jersey Central pier at the foot of West 41st Street that about a week ago the railroad detectives set a trap to catch the thieves. Several empty cars were left on a trestle together with one containing coffee and velours conspicuously marked "Consigned to John Wana-maker."

Detectives had watched the cars night and day and yesterday afternoon they saw three youths approaching. The latter were identified afterward as James Hoolihan, twenty-one, No. 543 West Forty-fourth Street; Harry Mullins, seventeen, No. 525 West Fortieth Street, and Daniel Carrigan, thirteen, No. 535 West Forty-eighth Street.

All three ran as Detective Martin Malley and Mark A. Fallon started to arrest them. A shot from Fallon's revolver caused two of the youths to stop. Hoolihan leaped from the pier to a cake of ice, which broke up under the impact of his body. He swam to the 40th Street pier, where he grasped a post. Leaving Malley with drawn revolver to guard the other youths, Fallon ran to 40th Street, accompanied by Policeman George Patton of the West 37th Street station, who had been attracted by the shot. Hoolihan was almost exhausted and just about to release his grasp on the pier support when he was flung up with a head knock. He lost consciousness and was taken a prisoner to Bellevue, where he is in a serious condition. The two other youths were locked up in the West 37th Street station on a charge of attempted burglary. The police say they confessed.

Post-Graduate Hospital to Raise a $2,000,000 Fund.

The New York Post-Graduate Medical School and Hospital, which since the elimination of Vienna, London and Berlin as centers of medical research has become the world's ranking institution devoted to teaching and research in applied medicine, yesterday announced a campaign to raise during the next three months $2,000,000 as an endowment fund.

FRANKLIN SIMON Individual Shops for Boys

An Institution Whose Constitution is Quality!

HERE are four Individual Shops for boys. They are separate in operation, but joined in co-operation. They sell different merchandise but use only one set of ideals. They voice different needs, but speak only one language, the language of quality.

TAKE, for example, our Wearmoor Clothes for Boys. The fabrics are all-wool, of course, but we do not stop at that. They must also conform to the standards of Wearmoor serviceability.

AND whether it is a Norfolk Suit, a Raglan Coat, or a Box-back model, every stitch of it is designed and tailored according to our own exacting Wearmoor specifications.

AS for style, each season it is the Individual Shops that do the real creative work in evolving models and setting new examples for the town.

AND no shop has a deeper sense of its responsibility to the mothers and fathers who pay the bills.

Will An Out-of-Date Custom Deprive You of New Orleans' Greatest Food This Spring and Summer?

It is interesting, the way certain customs of a Nation are started—then changed. Up to fifteen years ago molasses was considered a "winter food." Why? For no other reason than the fact that molasses was always sold from barrels.

No matter how much the old folks of fifty years ago yearned for molasses the year 'round, they had to wait for a cold snap to get it. Simply because it "came in barrels."

In the fall and winter the cool weather permitted molasses in barrels to "keep." But in spring and summer the heat caused it to sour, so folks were forced to stop buying it.

And then the feeling sort of went 'round that molasses was a "winter food."

Under the same marketing conditions, the same thing would have happened to any other good food.

TWENTY years ago a change started in the marketing of molasses. Penick & Ford, Ltd.—the largest molasses people in the world—canned it so that it would keep regardless of weather conditions—no matter how high the temperature cared to go.

Today people everywhere are eating Penick & Ford's BRER RABBIT Molasses in the middle of the summer the same as on the coldest day of January.

BRER RABBIT is real New Orleans Molasses. is put up in New Orleans in the world's largest and most sanitary molasses establishment—equipped with special machinery for the canning of BRER RABBIT.

The can of BRER RABBIT you get, from your grocer in mid-summer is as clean and fresh—as sweet and as pure—as the BRER RABBIT you buy in winter. Each can of BRER RABBIT Molasses is handled and sealed air-tight by the most modern methods.

BRER RABBIT Molasses is no more a "winter food" than wheat or meat or butter or sugar is. In fact, both molasses and sugar come from the same product—Sugar Cane.

The sugar shortage taught thousands and thousands of people to use GOLD LABEL BRER RABBIT Molasses instead of sugar in cooking and baking.

BRER RABBIT Molasses is not a Sugar substitute. It contains a large percentage of real cane sugar and is a natural sweetener—practically sugar itself.

For table use—as a spread on pancakes, biscuits, waffles, on bread for children—get GOLD LABEL BRER RABBIT.

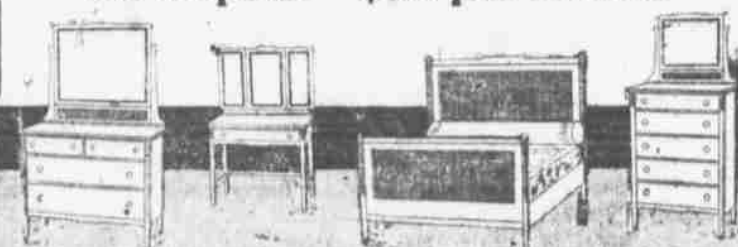

For cooking, baking and candy making, GREEN LABEL BRER RABBIT is more satisfactory than sugar. Besides its sugar value, it imparts its delicious and natural real New Orleans Molasses flavor and has unusually good baking qualities.

CHLOROX

The "Milled-in-Oil" Tooth Cleanser.
Removes Tartar—Strengthens Gums—
Protects Enamel

The remarkable ingredients which accomplish these phenomenal results are White Russian Oil and a finely pulverized non-abrasive brushing compound. These two elements are milled together so that every atom of polishing agent is impregnated with an atom of oil, which it carries into the minutest crevices of the teeth and under the overlapping portions of the gums. This oil penetrates hardened tartar deposits, softens them and frees them from the teeth. It lubricates teeth, keeps them clean for the future. It massages gums to healthy hardness over teeth free from pyorrhea and disease germs. It protects enamel from being scratched. Ask your druggist for the "Milled-in-Oil" tooth cleanser—Chlorox—in the blue and white checkered tube.
